He had removed the bit from the animal's mouth to feed it an apple when a passing bicyclist scared the horse, which ran away. In clinging to the head of the horse to stop him Mr. Burgess was dragged several blocks and finally knocked down and run over. He received numerous bruises but no bones were broken.

The Tell-Tale Wire.

The residence of Lieutenant Emery of the navy, which is unoccupied at present, was entered about 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon by a colored burglar, who cut the tell-tale wire as a precautionary measure. The cutting of the wire, however, turned in the alarm, and the officer who responded discovered the man in the act of carrying off a lot of silverware. On the approach of the officer the burglar drew a knife and attacked him. After a desperate struggle he was overpowered and taken to the station-house. He gave his name as Andrew Brown. He had been accompanied by a man who escaped. This morning he was arraigned in the Police Court and the case was continued until Thursday.

A Hard Case.

A colored girl, in a torn and dirty "Mother Hubbard," was up in the Police Court this morning for assaulting an aged, gray-haired woman named Annie Hoyne. When asked if she "committed an assault on Mrs. Hoyne," she said "I didn't throw no stone at nobody." Five dollars or fifteen days. The prisoner was immediately called back and charged and convicted of stealing a lot of fancy underwear, some of which she had on at the time. The owner was allowed to step into the cell and describe the prisoner of (her) the witness' skirts.

BOATING MEN ARRAIGNED.

The Washingtons Court a Speedy and Thorough Investigation.

It is said that the regatta committee is to investigate the Washington club. If such is the case every man who testifies for or against that club should be sworn first by a notary public. Unfortunately there are a number of the followers of Ananias among our boating men. Some of them think that it is no sin to further their selfish ends by a good old fashioned lie. The sanctity of an oath might have a wholesome restraint. One of the Sunday papers has to say in this connection, "The action of the committee in this matter is highly commendable and, whatever their verdict may be, the lovers of honest amateur rowing in the District will be satisfied. If the Washingtons have violated any of the rules of the National Association they have no right to participate in the Potomac regatta. If they have been falsely accused justice demands that they should be admitted without further delay."

Is this all justice demands? Can a club composed of gentlemen, such as compose the Washington Club, be asked for weeks behind the bars of "somebody said that somebody else said so and so?" And then when they are proven innocent, "justice demands that they be admitted without further delay." Justice demands something more; justice demands that the names of the boatsmen should be printed, that they should be shown up to the contempt and aversion of all lovers of sport; that they should be drummed from their several clubs, should they belong to such clubs; that they should be advertised that the venom would be harmless another time. This is what justice demands, and what justice is likely to get, besides. If the Washington Club has violated any of the rules of the National Association, it is the duty and privilege of that association alone to try it. The Washington Club appealed to the National Association. President Garfield of that association, knowing the standing of at least some of the members of the Washington Club, and knowing from their standing that it would be impossible for them to engage in any dishonorable work, simply advised them that the attacks were not worth notice.

Why should the Washington Club submit to be tried by the other clubs? The Washingtons do not shrink from the fullest investigation, but they do demand fair play, and what gentleman have they that they will receive fair play? They have been treated with suspicion; have they not good ground for suspicion in return? The Post, the Star and Mr. Palmer have offered cups to be rowed annually. If the Washingtons, when the matter should be by an unprejudiced committee of business men, appointed by Mr. Adams of the Star, Mr. Hutchins of the Post and Mr. Palmer. A committee so appointed would command the confidence of all. The argument to this will undoubtedly be that such a committee would know nothing of the laws of boat racing. The laws of boating on this subject could be mastered by a schoolboy in five minutes. The questions are questions of fact, not of law.

A man who has never seen a river knows that an amateur is one who takes part in sport for the love of it, and that if he receives pay for so taking part he ceases to be an amateur. The secret hints and innuendoes are to the effect that a member or members of the Washingtons are paid for rowing. If this is true then they should be disqualified forever. To charge the club of crooked work is to charge its members with such, or a knowledge of it. Do any but a few prejudiced persons believe that the gentlemen who compose the club, and are so well known here, would for one instant be guilty of an underhand dealing? The committee to sit this matter and place the responsibility where it belongs, should be constituted as here suggested.

Horse Talk.

Today is a great day in the racing world. The East and West meet at the home of the former, in the Champion stakes. Freehand, the six-year-old son of Longfellow, who has twice run a mile and a quarter lately in 2:09, will meet Miss Woodford, Wanda and Louella, the Champion stakes stakes, all the best of the Eastern two-year-olds meet Ban Fox, Blue Wing and Luminous.

The first race at Monmouth to-day is for three-year-olds, one mile. The best performer of the lot is Lennox, and he should win. The second race is a useful colt in Elgin and should about get the place. The second race is the great two-year-old race, and in it are five youngsters, between whom it is hard to pick—Electric, Portland, Ban Fox, Chickadee and Biggonnet. Though Portland has been the most successful, Electric's performances have always been good, and as he has three pounds the best of the weight, he should win, with Ban Fox second, and Portland third.

Miss Woodford will win the Champion stakes, with Wanda second. The fourth race should go to either Thackeray or East Lynne. The fifth race should be won by The Slasher or Executor; the sixth by Windfall or Detective; the jumping race by either Jim McQuinn or Gonfalon.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer predicts that Phyllis will win Thursday's race at Philadelphia, but that Wilkes will press him closely.

A Fine Race.

A great international handicap bicycle race open to professionals has been arranged for September 1 at Athletic Park for a purse of $500 in gold, to be divided into five prizes, mile heats. The entries will be limited to twelve men, and each man will run two heats each day, each heat being decided by a different rider, until every man entered has competed against all the starters. Twelve heats will be run each day, the winner of the greatest number of heats to receive first prize.

Mitchell's Opinion of Sullivan.

Two athletic forms locked in close embrace were twisting and turning over the massive twisting rug in the Central Police Station, Baltimore, Saturday, each trying to gain supremacy in the presence of a number of members of the Police Department. The wrestlers, who were having an exercising bout, were William Muldoon, the champion, one of the most perfectly formed of men, and Charles Mitchell, the English pugilist. During their stay in this city last week for hours each day they practiced in the gymnasium, which Mr. Muldoon considers as complete an institution of its kind as there is in the United States. Between the rounds the men had breathing spells, during which they openly expressed their opinions, particularly on the relative merits of wrestlers and pugilists. The German wrestler Aba, with whom Muldoon had a contest in New York some time ago, and whom the ex-policeman was unable to throw, was pronounced a mystery by Mr. Muldoon. That gentleman said Aba was possessed of enormous strength and wonderful powers of grip, which made him in this direction the most dangerous of adversaries.

Whether Aba has any science as a wrestler Muldoon could not say, as the German in his match with the speaker had acted solely on the defensive, and had given no display of agile ability. "What do I think of Sullivan as a fighter now?" replied Muldoon to a question. "Well, not as much as I did, a man who drinks too hard cannot keep up his athletic standing either in the ring or out of it. Besides, I cannot see that he ever did anything remarkable, with or without the gloves. He was nothing but a brawler, but that was not to be expected, for he was a handsome face in a smile which showed a row of pretty teeth. "He went around the country knocking men out who were of no recognized value. Why, he couldn't knock Charley, here, out of the ring in New York."

"No he couldn't," broke in Mitchell, "and I was only 142 pounds weight then. I am 166 pounds now, and I feel satisfied that I can whip him in a 24-foot ring or with gloves. Anyhow I am willing to risk $2,500 of my money on the issue. I don't want to make money off of Sullivan's reputation. I want to show him I am the better man. Really I believe he is afraid to meet me for fear he would get thrashed. He may be the great man of the ring, but he is not a pugilist. He is a pugilist as he started towards Muldoon for another tussle."

John L. Sullivan left Boston to-day for Belfast, Me., to go into training for his fight with McCaffrey, which is to come off near Cincinnati, August 25.

The Bicycle Club Tour.

The Capital Bicycle Club will start its annual outing next Thursday. The program of the tour, which was arranged as follows: The club will go from here on Thursday to Baltimore, and there take the steamer D. H. Miller for Boston, stopping at Norfolk and Virginia Beach on Friday. On arriving in Boston Mr. Sullivan will remain by the Boston clubs, and will remain in the city until the next day, when they will mount their wheels for Brockton. Thence they will go by rail to New Bedford, and from there to Martha's Vineyard. September 5th they will go by steamer to Portland, Me., thence by wheel to Boston via Orchard, Rye and York Beaches, Portsmouth and Newburyport, and tour around Cape Ann. From Boston they will go to Springfield with 500 Boston wheelmen. Thence to New York via New Haven. At New York they will cross the Brooklyn bridge and take a run down to Coney Island. They will return home September 12th.

He Turned Out Other Side.

Among the cases that came before Judge Mills in the Police Court to-day were two assault cases in the Schultz family, whose family fights occupy considerable of the time of the Police Court. Ernest Schultz, a florist on D street, was charged with assaulting his wife, and with assaulting his sister, Clara Englehardt. He was also charged in conjunction with his wife with assaulting the same person. Mrs. Englehardt stated that she was attacked and beaten both of the prisoners, and at another time by her brother alone. Ernest took the stand and surprised every one present by denying that he retaliated. He even looked surprised himself when he said: "Judge, when she hit me on one side of the face I said, 'Clara, do you know what I feel like?' and she said, 'If your face is struck turn the other side.' 'Five dollars,' was the significant remark of His Honor with a smile.

Kinging Grace Church Chimes.

Professor F. Widdows, the expert bell ringer at Washington, rang the chimes at Grace Church, New York, during the funeral procession, upon invitation of John Senia. The bells were muffled for the occasion by Professor Widdows' patent mufflers, which decreased the vibrations and gave the bells a mournful tone. The following selections were played: Tolling of the minute bells; "The Muffled Peal," in F minor; "Dead March in Saul," "Rock of Ages," "Pie as a Bird," "Nearer, My God, to Thee," "Amen," "Amen of Jesus," "Peace, Troubled Soul," "I Know that my Redeemer Liveth," "Peyler's Hymn," "Windham," "Misereere," from Trovatore; Schubert's "Ave Maria," and the funeral march composed by Professor Widdows for the occasion. Senia played the Garfield funeral march.

Nardello Twice a Murderer.

Major Dye has strong circumstantial evidence connecting Antonio Nardello with another murder similar to the one he has recently confessed to. This murder occurred in Maryland. The facts furnished by the American in November, 1884. Nardello was boarder in the house of Antonio De Baldo of Northeast, Cecil County, Md. November 19, 1884, he was seen the greater part of the day with Nardello. Late in the evening Nardello returned, but De Baldo was never again seen alive. March 19, a body was found under the snow outside of the town. The body was identified by Carmine De Baldo, a son of the missing man, as his father. Nardello left the town a few days later, and a coroner's inquest followed and Nardello was strongly suspected.

Major Dye has written to the authorities at that place for all the facts in the case.

Death of an Army Nurse.

Mrs. Emma Hayward, who was a nurse in Fairfax Seminary Hospital during the war, died in this city Saturday morning. She came here from Buffalo to attend her son John A. Hayward who was wounded at the second battle of Bull Run, and after that devoted her time to ameliorate the sufferings of the soldiers throughout the remainder of the war.

When She Gets Out.

Edith Williams, a ten-year-old colored girl, was in the dock at the Police Court this morning for assaulting another little colored girl. The girl in the dock, as the other passed her to testify, said: "Never mind, gal, I'm gwine ter beat yer when I git out." She was sent down for fifteen days.

SOUTH WASHINGTON.

A PROBABLY FATAL AFFRAY. A serious and probably fatal altercation took place between James Gray and James Gallagher, two colored citizens of South Washington, in an alley between Second and Third and E and F street southwest, yesterday morning. Gray and Gallagher, who formerly were intimate friends, just returned from church, and while seated on the front steps of their respective houses in the alley, entered into a theological discussion. The ignorance of both on the subject was soon displayed, when the discussion drifted into a dispute, which soon grew so warm that the disputants began to exchange epithets entirely out of accordance with their Christian characters, until Gray overstepped what he considered to be the bounds of decency, and in his resentment the latter sprang upon him with a razor, slashing him several times across the back and arm. Gray picked up an axe that was lying near by, and turning suddenly upon his assailant dealt him a heavy blow on the top of the head, which felled him to the ground with a fractured skull. The police arrived on the scene at this point and both men, who were bleeding copiously, were carried to the station-house, where they were attended by Drs. Hoke and Tyler, after which, Gallagher was taken to Providence Hospital and Gray to Freedman's Hospital in the police ambulance. The injuries of Gallagher were pronounced serious and his recovery is doubtful.
